The Pope Issues Strongly Against Them.

Ottawa Gets a New Archbishop—Cardinal Gibbons Gets His Insignia To-day.

POPE LEO AND K. OF L'S.

Text of the Mandate of Excommunication of Members of the K. of L.

OTTAWA, Ontario, June 21.—The sent of the council of the church, receptly held at Quebec, have been called to Rome and approved by the holy see, being returned to America for promulgation, have been received by Cardinal Tachereau. The principal mandate of the decrees is the following, which is directed against the Knights of Labor, and was, by direction of the holy father, read in all the churches throughout Canada yesterday. The wording of the mandate is as follow:

"The cosmopolitan character of secret societies, and that of the Knights of Labor in particular, necessarily leads their members to compulsory obedience of the dictates of a council residing in a foreign country, which council at a given time may not only have interests at variance with those of the government to which its members owe allegiance, but may even be at war with God. For these and other reasons the church could not consistently tolerate the organization or approve of the means resorted to in order to attain the desired end. The council also deemed it prudent in the church and christianity to consider the secret aims of the promoters of Free Masonry, and to warn the adherents of the Catholic churches against joining any such organizations, especially Knights of Labor, under pain of excommunication."

In another section of the pastoral letter it contained a quotation from Leo Faxile, of France, who was a prominent member of the free masons of old France until last summer. He thinks masonry is a grotesque imitation of Catholicism, and has its rites, but its promoters desire and have their own ceremony apart from the teachings of the peace of God and desire to extinguish and put from existence the teachings of the Catholic faith.

BUTCHERS' BLOWOUT.

Considerable commotion was occasioned at an early hour yesterday morning in this city among the residents, the cause of which was the Butchers' union excursion to Warsaw. At 7:30 the Princess band marched down Calhoun street for the south depot, which was a signal for people that it was near train time. At 8:30 a train composed of seven coaches was comfortably filled with those desirous of visiting our pleasant little suburb about which so much has been said as a pleasure resort, among them being many of Fort Wayne's prominent citizens including their entire families. Promptly at the appointed time the engine pulled out and landed the "men of gore" and their friends in the "City of Lakes." Warsaw is a nice little city and the summer resort, lying north and in between two beautiful lakes, connected by a canal, will, with the expenditure yet of several thousand dollars make one of the nicest resorts in the west. But it is the opinion of her own people, as well as visitors, that they began running excursions before they were properly prepared for them, as in an affair of this sort the first impression goes a great ways in establishing the place permanently.

Warsaw is a temperance and a religious city and yesterday only those who knew the town well, were able to get even a glass of beer, a beverage greatly appreciated by many of the Fort Wayneites. It is understood that but one more excursion will be run there on Sunday and this would not be allowed only that the date has already been fixed. It is said that Superintendent Law, of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago railroad company, was severely criticised for permitting the date yesterday to be filled, as many of the prominent stockholders in the resort are religiously inclined.

NOTES.

There were about 600 tickets sold all told.

The railroad company got a commission.

Tickets to the number of 360 were collected on the train.

Gen. Reub Williams, of the Times, was on hand to greet his many friends.

Several excursionists fell in the lake, but aside from getting wet were not very much damaged.

Scott Reiter, formerly of this city, but now employed there, made it pleasant for numerous friends.

The excursion train followed from Warsaw in the wake of No. 8 and arrived here at 8 o'clock.

Councilman H. Haiber acted as the representative of the butchers in conjunction with the conductor of the train in taking tickets.

Mr. and Mrs. Lot Logan, of this city, were the guests of Mrs. J. H. Lones, their daughter. Mr. Lones formerly resided here but is now Pittsburg ticket agent at Warsaw.

The steamer cannot pass through the channel connecting the two lakes, because of the shallow water. A new steamer, with less draft will soon be placed on the lakes.

THE SENTINEL representative is indebted to Mr. Gene Gordon and his estimable wife for courtesies. Through the kindness of this hospitable couple we were enabled to visit all points of interest in and about Warsaw.

Railroad Y. M. C. A. Notes.

LONDON, June 21.—The Times publishes what is says is a private special circular recently sent by president of the supreme council to different "centres" of the Irish Republican brotherhood throughout the kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland. The gist of it lies in the claim that to the efforts of Fenians is Ireland indebted for the present advantageous position occupied by the Irish cause and in the statement that while Gladstone's scheme is inadequate, because Ireland must have nothing short of independence. It has the duty of Irishmen to support the premier in every way in order to enable him to complete the step he wishes to take. The document is marked "to be destroyed when read."

Concerning Thunder and Lightning.

Meteorologists have found that there can be no thunder and lightning without rain. When thunder is heard beneath a clear sky, the reports must either come from distant clouds or be the result of some other cause than a discharge of electricity. Harvest or heat lightning is produced by a distant storm. Thunder seldom accompanies heat lightning, the sound reaching only about twelve miles, while lightning is often seen, by reflection upon nearer clouds, at a much greater distance.—Chicago Times.

A TREASURY expert says that it is very difficult to detect counterfeit gold coin. He says: "Those filled with platinum have a fair ring, and the joint in the edge is effaced by remilling. Platinum is worth only about one-third of the value of gold, weight for weight. I have $20 gold pieces, out of which $14 worth of gold had been taken and replaced by platinum, making an exceedingly dangerous counterfeit, which only a good judge of coin can detect. The ring is good and the weight is there, while the whole outside of the coin is genuine.

CONGRESS.

What the National Legislators Did To-day.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—The chair today laid before the senate the orrdentials of Hon. Nelson W. Aldrich, United States senator from Rhode Island. Read and filed.

Mr. Hoar, from the committe on judiciary, reported fovorably a bill to grant Dearborn park, Chicago, to the city for the use and benefit of the public and benevolent institutions. On motion of Mr. Logan the bill was at once taken up and passed.

Mr. George, from the committee on judiciary, reported favorably a bill to remove the political disabilities of J. G. Flourney, of Mississippi, and on motion the bill passed, the vote being unanimous.

Mr. Frye, from the committee on rules, reported favorably the Edmunds resolution providing for such amendment to the rules as admit of debate on motion to reconsider. The resolution was agreed to and the rules were amended accordingly.

The President has sent to congress fifteen veto messages, thirteen of which are private pension bills, the others provide for public buildings at Sioux City, Iowa, and Zanesville, Ohio. The messages have not been laid before the houses of congress.

HOUSE.

The speaker laid before the house a communication from the assistant secretary of the treasury submitting an estimate of an appropriation amounting to $626,744 for the transportation of mails on non-subsidized roads controlled by the Central Pacific Railroad company. Referred.

On motion of Mr. Townsend, of Illinois, the senate amendments to the pension appropriation bill were non-concurred in, and Messrs, Townsend, Wilson and Long were appointed conferees.

The house having resumed consideration of the naval appropriation bill, it was rejected. Yeas, 99; Nays, 141.

A motion was made Saturday by Mr. Goff to recommit the bill with instructions to the committee on naval affairs, to report it back with amendment making provision for the completion of the double turreted monitors. Bill then passed.

The house committee on invalid pensions, to-day agreed to amalgamate the substitute for the Blair bill, pensioning disabled soldiers, with a bill to increase the rate of pensions for soldiers, who have lost a leg or arm, and attach to the combined bills a clause imposing an income tax to meet the expenditure involved.

The clause is patterned after the income tax bill introduced in the 47th congress by General Ewing. Statistics collected at the time the bill was introduced indicated that a revenue of $63,000,000 per annum could be raised in this way. The president signed about fifty private pension bills to-day.

THERE wouldn't be much chance for an anarchist paper in China. A Chinese newspaper writer named Wongtz was recently sentenced to be quartered because, in a scientific article, he had enumerated the names of several dead Emperors, an act contrary to court etiquette. Afterward his punishment was mitigated to decapitation. His children will be put to death in the autumn for the sin of their father.

THE LAKE THAT JOSEPH MADE.

Recent Discovery of the Bed of an Ancient Reservoir of the Nile.

The European press published the statement recently that the Egyptian minister of public works had decided to utilize the recent discovery of the bed of ancient Lake Moeris. He wishes to rebuild the old canal that nearly 4,000 years ago was dug between the basin and the Nile, and make this great depression about sixty miles southwest of Cairo once more the reservoir for the surplus waters of the Nile at flood. He has, therefore, declined the offer made through Mr. C. Whitehouse to restore Lake Moeris by private enterprise to its ancient function of receiving and dispensing the waters of the Nile.

This is a proposal to repeat in modern times a great engineering enterprise which the patriarch Joseph is said by some authorities to have carried out. It is all the more noteworthy because the fact that Lake Moeris ever existed has been denied for centuries. Linaut some forty years ago revived the notion that Herodotus told the truth after all, but not until 1882 did the best geographical authorities agree that there was once a Lake Moeris, and that its ancient bed had been found.

Of the wonders that Herodotus described as existing near Memphis, two, the Labyrinth and Lake Moeris, have been unknown to modern research. He and other ancient writers agreed in describing Lake Moeris, as a reservoir of the Nile, 450 miles in circumference, 300 feet deep, and full of fish of twenty-two species. There were dykes at the mouths of the canal by which the engineers stored up or distributed its water supply. The lake was mostly bordered by the desert. On its banks lived multitudes of fishermen, who caught and salted the fish that bred freely in the lake, which owed its existence to one or more artificial channels connecting it with the Herodotus, Strabo, Diodorus, Pliny, and other Greek and Latin writers have been freely charged with falsehood or exaggeration in what they wrote about Lake Moeris. C. Ptolemy placed the horn-shaped lake on his map at the very place where exists the great depression of similar shape to which it is now assigned. Some copies of his map, however, did not contain the lake, and editors of Ptolemy in the fifteenth century expurged it from his maps. Chiefly through the researches of Linaut, Whitehouse, and, last of all, Stadler, whose observations completed in February established the correctness of previous explorations, the world has at last been convinced that the southern edge of the Fayoum exists a great depression, which is 300 feet below the level of the river, and is separated by a chain of hills from the Nile, with which it was once connected by the Bahr Josuf or canal of Joseph, and perhaps also by another artificial channel.

It is asserted by Mr. Whitehouse and the engineers in Egypt's service who accompanied him in his last journey in 1883 that the work of restoring the lake will prove comparatively easy. They estimate that during the time of the Nile's flood the basin can receive 60,000,000 cubic meters of waters a day, and that this volume, shut up in a safe reservoir, will avert all danger of the excessive inundations that afflict the fertile delta. From this reservoir also, when the Nile is low, water can be sent back to the river for purposes of navigation or irrigation. They also assert that a vast amount of land now perpetually under water can, by means of this reservoir, be restored to agriculture; that the big lakes around Alexandria will thus be drained, and the Mediterranean shores of Egypt will again resemble the mouths of the Rhine and the coast of Holland.—New York Sun.

Value of Rest and Recreation.

In his paper on "Rest and Repair in London Life," in The Fortnightly Review, Dr. Robson Roose—referring to the subject of an annual holiday—says there can be no doubt as to the advantages of this means of rest and recreation. Where to spend a holiday and how best to enjoy it are topics which should frequently engage the thoughts of a man who is working at high pressure. The idea of a holiday, even if the realization be somewhat distant, lessens present discomforts, and the carrying out of a well-devised plan enhances the enjoyment when the time arrives. The number of ways in which a holiday may be profitably spent is almost infinite. Something definite should be aimed at and done during each holiday; an active-minded man must have occupation of some kind even in his hours of recreation. A change of work is, indeed, a form of rest, and happily there is no lack of subjects for every variety of mind. By such means as these mind and body are alike renewed and invigorated.—Chicago News.

Good Cookery Promotes Temperance.

The London Sanitary Record states that a few weeks ago several gentlemen, members of the Newcastle lodge of Good Templars, gave practical demonstration of cookery; showing before a numerous audience how to prepare several cheap and useful dishes on hygienic principles in a satisfactory manner. It was held that there is a marked connection between temperance and good cookery, as it is well known that many men are driven to the public house through having a good dinner spoiled by bad cooking. The demonstrations, which were watched with no little interest and amusement, especially by the female portion of the audience, proved eminently successful.—Exchange.

CRASH!

Went a Store at Decatur, Indiana.

The Hardware House of B. J. Treveer is Destroyed by an Oil Explosion.

And John Ohlmer, a Lodger, Meets With Instant Death in the Wrecked Building.

AN EXPLOSION

Causes the Death of a Clerk and $15,000 Damages.

DECATUR, Ind., June 21.—Yesterday morning an explosion wrecked the hardware store of B. J. Treveer and caused the death of John Ohlmer, who roomed in the second story. It is supposed that a can of benzine leaked and caught fire when the clerk lighted a lamp. Loss, $15,000.

The explosion demolished rear part of the building, which was a two-story brick and throwing the front doors and a large plate-glass window into the street. John Omler, the clerk, was closing the store at the time, and recived such injuries by the doors falling on him that he died in three hours. The explosion was caused by a can of gasoline taking fire from a lamp. The damage to building and stock will reach $6,000; insured for $1,500, equally in the following companies: Fire Association of Philadelphi, Royal of Cincinnati, and German Insurance of Freeport.

NURSE FOR THE ROYAL BABE.

An Important Function That Now Distresses the Spanish Court.

The great question of the hour at the court of Madrid is the choice of a nurse for the royal infant. Formerly, and down even to the reign of Ferdinand VII., a high court functionary, accompanied by a physician and a numerous suite, traveled through the provinces of Galice and Santander in quest of the nurse who was to be chosen for the royal babe. It is the province of Santander, especially that portion known as "the mountain" that has furnished the greatest contingent of royal nurses. It was once regarded as one of the industries of the place. The royal delegate visited Santander first, and his arrival was solemnly announced in all the towns and villages. The major presented the candidates to him and the doctor put them through a public examination.

To-day it is the nurses who come to Madrid. They are presented to the major-domo, who takes down their names and then passes them to the physician. The work of choosing is no light affair, for the number who aspire to the position of royal nurse is enormous and the applications and recommendations pour in from all sides. This is not surprising, as the position is a very agreeable one. The occupation of royal nurse is very dignified, to begin with. The wages are also very high. The nurse is treated as one of the ladies of the palace, her magnificent costumes are frequently renewed and as they become her own property her wardrobe is soon varied and luxurious. The nurse is never asked to attend to the toilet of the royal infant; a femme de chambre is especially appointed for that duty. The infant remains with the nurse at night, however. Apart from the promenades which she makes with the baby, the nurse may go out when she pleases, but she is always accompanied by two ladies of the palace. When the royal infant is weaned the nurse receives a large money gift, all the members of the royal family give her rich presents and the sovereign bestows on her a pension from the privy purse. It will be readily understood then that the number of applicants for the position is large.

A few days ago Dr. Sanchex Ocana, of the royal faculty of medicine, examined twenty-two robust young women, a few of whom evidently did not belong to the peasant class. They had already nursed the children of some of the highest of the Madrilene aristocracy. Among the applicants one attracted the special attention of everybody. She was decked out in a splendid costume of red and black velvet, trimmed with gold lace, and wore diamond earrings and a dentelle mantilla. She was Raimonda, who has recently been nurse to the baby prince of Bavaria. A repose of nine months in her charming cottage of Revilla allows her to resume her former functions. All the women who have presented themselves are remarkably beautiful, but no choice has yet been made. The most minute investigation takes place before final acceptance concerning the family, the children and especially the moral character of the nurse. The choice is regarded as quite an event in Spain.—Madrid Cor. Paris Figaro.

That Tired Feeling

The warm weather has a debilitating effect, especially upon those who are within doors most of the time. The peculiar, yet common, complaint known as "that tired feeling," is the result. This feeling can be entirely overcome by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which gives new life and strength to all the functions of the body.

"I could not sleep; had no appetite. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and soon began to sleep soundly; could get up without that tired and languid feeling; and my appetite improved." R. A. SANFORD, Kent, Ohio.

Strengthen the System

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of remedial agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over." J. P. THOMPSON, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." I. BARRINGTON, 130 Bank Street, New York City.

STEPS are being taken in Paris to prevent the employment of girls in certain theaters, and in cafes chantant, who are under 15 years of age.

AN attempt to take a census of Paris is proving a failure, because the people fear the lists are submitted to private detective agencies, and improper use made of the information thus obtained.

MOCKING-BIRDS can be taught anything in the way of tunes. Macon used to boast of a bird that whistled "Dixie," and years ago a Frenchman traveled about the country playing airs upon the piano which his bird would follow accurately. At the Pulaski House, in Savannah, a negro used to keep a bird that would whistle a good alto to tunes his master whistled.

ONE of John Ruskin's latest deliverances is one of his best: "The Bible is the greatest group of writings extant in the rational world, put into the grandest language of the rational world in the first strength of Christianity, by an entirely wise and kind saint, St. Jerome; translated afterward with beauty and felicity into every language of the Christian world, and the guide, since so translated, of all the arts and acts of that world which have been noble, fortunate, and happy."

A DISCOVERY has been made by which the faded ink on parchments may be so restored as to render the writing perfectly legible. The process consists in moistening the paper with water and then passing over the lines in writing a brush which has been wet in a solution of ammonia. The writing will immediately appear quite dark in color, and this color, in the case of parchments, it will preserve. On paper, however, the color gradually fades again, but it may be restored at pleasure by the application of sulphide.

A MR. DE LACY, of Nottingham, England, has invented a remarkable automatic life-size figure in the semblance of a Turk, The motive power is electricity. Under the manipulation of the inventor it takes up a copy of the Koran and apparently reads every page, which it turns over, at the same time naturally moving its eyes and turning its head at intervals. The numerous acts it can accomplish are astonishing. The surprise to spectators was great when "Ali" comfortably lifted a hundred weight, picked up a feather, wrote a sentence on a slate, played a musical instument, tore up a paper or went through the sword exercise.

A PAPER published in Orange County, New York, says that the last merchantable tree in the vast hemlock forests that have supplied the mills on Dyberry Creek, one of the tributaries of the Laxawaxen River, for more than a century, has been cut, and recently the veteran river pilot, "Bill" Kimble, drove the last log down the stream that will ever be run to the mills. He also drove the first log that was ever cut in the great forest, in 1860, and has never missed a day's log-driving on the creek in all the intervening time. This tract of hemlock was nearly the last of any extent in Wayne County, whose forests, ten years ago, were yielding 100,000,000 feet of that lumber a year. Fifteen years ago more leather was tanned in Wayne County than in any other county in the Union. The disappearance of the hemlock has caused all but two or three of the tanneries to be abandoned. All who were engaged in the business made large fortunes, and nearly all of them are now engaged in the same business in Elk, Forrest, Warren, and other western counties, where the greatest hemlock forests in the world still densely cover the hills. The tanning industry of these counties now supplies almost the entire sole-leather product of the world. The cutting away of the hemlock woods in Wayne County has had a disastrous effect on the watercourses, many large streams having become almost entirely dry within the past decade.

THE English laborer who recently undertook to imitate Dr. Tanner as a faster came to grief. He was known as the "Fasting man of Guilford." Mysterious voices commanded him to go forty days without food. He was 74 years of age when he started in to obey the strange command. He drank tea without milk or sugar, and smoked a pipe, incessantly. He survived the ordeal, though reduced to actual skin and bones, and celebrated his performance by making a hearty meal of a leg of mutton. The gorging was too much for his enfeebled stomach, and he died in a couple of days. His surviving relatives were much distressed because the old man had just received a tempting offer from a museum manager who was prepared to make a guinea or two out of his notoriety.

NOTHING has excited more amusement during the debate on the oleomargarine bill, writes a Washington correspondent, than the efforts of some members to pronounce that word aright. At first most of those who spoke pronounced the word as if the "g" were given the sound of "j," but one or two who are authority generally on the question of orthography, gave the "g" a hard sound, and the example has been followed by nearly all who have had the floor later on the debate. Randolph Tucker made desperate efforts to get the word right when he was speaking. "O-le-o-mar-mar-gerine" he managed to ejaculate after a struggle in which the last syllable was emphasized more than the others, and the House fairly roared. The reading clerk is one of those who have reformed their pronunciation of the word since the debate began. He now gives "g" a hard sound, and the adherents of the soft "g" are dwindling out of notice.

"I KNOW a city which is the capital of a State, but which has no daily newspaper, and no way of learning the news of the day before 10 o'clock in the morning," said a commercial traveler. "That city," continued he, "is Frankfort, Ky. Its people our intelligent and refined, but they seem to care little about what is going on in the world. Louisville is only sixty miles away, but none of the newspapers of that city has succeeded in getting its editions out into the State in time to make them valuable. But perhaps a Kentucky man enjoys an old newspaper best. I rather think he does. At least he is not given to favoring new ideas. Why, there is a pretty little city near Frankfort which is nearly five miles from a railroad. A railroad company offered to build a line through the city if the residents would give the enterprise some encouragement. A meeting of citizens was called, and it was agreed that a railroad was not needed. 'When any of us wants to go on a journey, which isn't often,' said one prominent citizen, 'we have only five miles to go to take a train. What could be more convenient than that? Besides, if the locomotive should run through our beautiful city it would frighten our hosses and scare our women and children, sir.'"

DR. RALPH N. ISHAM, of Chicago, writes to the Medical News commenting upon some recent editorial remarks of that journal concerning the death of a Dr. Warner, of Baltimore, as the result of "fear of hydrophobia." Dr. Isham is a firm believer in the notion that it is not necessary that the animal producing the bite shall be the subject of rabies to induce hydrophobia in the subject bitten. In addition to many cases on record—notably that of the Duke of Hamilton, Governor General of Canada, bitten by a tame fox—Dr. Isham cites a case under his own observation. A boy eight years of age while shaking and cuffing a cat, for some fancied offense, was bitten severely in the thumb, and died of hydrophobia twelve days afterward. The cat was secured and kept under observation for over four months, during which it remained in perfect health, showing no symptom of rabies. "Analogy proves," says the Doctor, "through the animal kingdom that the secretions (saliva) are so changed under the influence of sudden fear or anger as to become poisonous." This is a very different thing from hydrophobia as the result of fear or dread of the disease. That the secretions, especially the lacteal, may become poisonous through the influence of the emotions is a fact which does not depend upon analogy. Text-books on physiology abound in well-authenticated cases of mothers and nurses who, after experiencing some powerful mental emotion of grief, terror, or anger, have taken up healthy babes and suckled them to death in a few moments. Burdach mentions an instance where even a puppy was seized with epileptic convulsions on sucking its mother, who had just been teased into a fit of rage. In these cases, as in the case of the boy cited by Dr. Isham, the cause of death is an active physical agent, operating without regard to the mental condition of the victim. In Dr. Warner's case death was caused by nervous fear in his own mind—a morbid dread that he was going to have hydrophobia. Probably not the least valuable feature of Pasteur's treatment is that it allays or prevents such fear.

MODERN MANIAS AND MANIACS.

"These modern manias are filling the world with maniacs," asserted a philosopher recently, alluding sarcastically to the various agitations that of late keep the world in a state of wonder as to what will be the next new movement.

A few years ago everybody began to walk. It is true that all the world acquires this art at an early age, but the movement merged into a mania when pedestrians who walked for wages suddenly began to multiply upon the earth. Tramp, tramp, tramp, not only the boys, but also the girls, began to take up the line of march.

By and by, the cost of shoe leather must have troubled the economists, and Necessity, the reputed mother of invention, produced the bicycle. Straightway all the masculines became a victim to the bicycle craze, and desperate attempts were made to gain renown by speeding over the ground, on the best attempt at a flying machine that was ever patented. This craze, when it began to prey upon the feminine mind, took the form of tricycling; but the dear creatures had already gone daft with pasting pictures on old jars and jugs, and, later on, with spoiling the pristine purity of their best china by making it gorgeous with bugs, birds, and flowers—so humanity was spared the sight of every woman in the land whizzing through it on a tricycle.

Next, there came a long-haired æsthete from across the blue Atlantic, and immediately the once despised sunflower was given a place beside the stately lily. Along with Oscar Wilde and the sunflower, came the stork pensively meditating on one leg and liberally sprinkled over tidies, plaques, and whatever else was essential to household happiness.

The prevalence of the Mother Hubbard craze became appalling, and lovely woman indeed "stooped to folly" when she donned the dress. Another mania that rendered the whole feminine world akin in its madness, was the manufacture of the crazy quilt, and this article caused the wholesale sacrifice of many a youth's happiness and neckties. The Japanese craze continues to be manifested in the form of fans upon our walls; the hot water craze was cheap and harmless; that which calls for antiquities never included old maids; the autograph affliction has driven scores of people crazy, and postage stamp and coin collections goad the collectors to frenzy when somebody else outdoes them.

But the evolution craze which evolved the dudes from some mysterious source was the worst one of them all, and society has not yet recovered from the introduction of the species. After these came the coachmen who posed before the public as the heroes of the hour, but the roller rink mania has caused them to be superseded by the darling of the chalk dust arena. Roller skating and progressive euchre have proved the most contagious crazes that have ever unbalanced mankind's mental equilibrium, and the person who has escaped these last and greatest of them all, surely is one of the present wonders of the world.—Lizzie Snyder, in St. Louis Magazine.

The Voice of the People.

The people, as a whole, seldom make mistakes and the unanimous voice of praise which comes from those who have used Hood's Sarsaparilla, fully justifies the claims of the proprietors of this great medicine. Indeed, these very claims are based entirely on what the people say Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for them. Read the abundant evidence of its curative powers, and give it a fair, honest trial.

THREE CABINET LADIES.

PORTRAITS OF SOCIAL LEADERS AT WASHINGTON.

Mrs. Endicott, Mrs. Manning, Mrs. Vilas and Miss Cleveland—They Represent New England, New York and the West. The Inventor of "Innocuous Desuetude."

Of the historic twenty-six persons who gathered around the festal board at the sumptuous "stand up" wedding supper of President Cleveland, four were wives of cabinet officers. These ladies were called from private life to a semi-official social position when their husbands accepted the various portfolios of their respective departments. They appear to be a harmonious gathering of women, on the whole. The country has heard less of that petty and disgraceful bickering about who shall go ahead of whom and which shall sit nearest the president at state dinners than usually gets to the public ear in such cases. The cabinet ladies have certainly done their best to make President Cleveland's administration a social success. They seem to have been equal throughout to the arduous social duties required of them—duties so wearing that in the beginning, poor, sweet Kate Bayard succumbed to the strain. They are courteous, dignified, handsomely dressed and hospitable. Our readers will be glad to see some of their portraits.

By reason of seniority, the wife of Secretary of War Endicott is presented first. Her face is strong and clear-cut. One would say it was the typical Boston face. Mrs. Endicott looks like the high-bred New England woman of long descent. She wore a red pompon in her handsome gray hair at the president's wedding. Mrs. Endicott is her husband's first cousin. Both are descendants of the Putnam family.

MRS. ENDICOTT.

One effect of that wedding will be that he newspaper correspondents can no longer periodically inform the public who is the first lady in the land. We have a first lady now, no mistake, and one who, judging from her chin, will be able to keep so. Washington etiquette is solemnly peculiar, and, like the ways of Providence, hard to understand. A lot of old ladies of both sexes have it in their especial keeping, and believe the sun would not rise behind the dome of the Capitol if they did not prescribe which foot the first lady in the land should put forward when she starts down stairs of a morning. It would give the country such a delightful thrill if some official lady should suddenly give all their fusty old notions a deliberate slap in the face, and do as she pleased.

Here we have a typical New York woman's face, and one may be pardoned for saying a very pretty one, too. Mrs. Manning is originally from Albany, a town which is as proud of its blue blood and old families as even Boston itself. It is said to be easy enough to get into high life in New York city if one has money, but almost impossible for an outsider to do the same in Albany. The old Dutch element is stronger there than in the metropolis.

MRS. MANNING.

Mrs. Manning had not been long married to her husband when he became secretary of the treasury. He was a widower before their marriage. The lady dresses richly and tastefully. Like most New York women she knows just the right thing to put on and how to wear it. Mrs. Manning is as handsome as her husband, who is noted for his fine personal appearance. Together they are a noble looking pair.

If an artist had sought the country over for the three types of women here shown, the New England, the New York and the western, he could not have selected better specimens than Mrs. Endicott, Mrs. Manning and Mrs. Vilas. There is an earnest, kindly look in Mrs. Vilas' honest eyes that attracts one at once. She looks a hearty, whole-souled woman, with character enough to impress herself upon any society. She and the postmaster general went to the capital from Wisconsin. Mrs. Vilas dresses handsomely and is fond of blue gowns.

MRS. VILAS.

There is one, too, who, for a season, was associated with these ladies who stamped her personality upon Washington society more than any of them. That was Miss Rose Elizabeth Cleveland. She held herself bravely and well in Washington, and leaves it with the best wishes and the sincere good will of all the country. She was not aggressive or did not attempt to revolutionize Washington ways.

She did her best, modestly and with dignity, as mistress of the White House, holding still somewhat to the old ways and the old convictions which had been with her for a lifetime. One is only sorry that she yielded so far to the dictates of the old cats of both sexes at Washington as to try to peg up and confine her artistic, short, curly hair and make it look as though it was "done up." Her own way of wearing it suited her much better, and consequently looked better. When she was a school teacher her friends called her "Johnny Cleveland." In spite of President Cleveland's mild statement that he invented the phrase "innocuous desuetude" himself, there will always be those who will believe Libbie did it.

MISS CLEVELAND.

Now that she resigns the scepter of the White House to young Mrs. Cleveland, Miss Rose Elizabeth retires to her home at Holland Patent, N. Y., to engage in literary work. It is a pretty home, fitted up with the earnings of her book of essays. Success to her literary efforts, and we'll all read her novel, the "Long Row," as soon as it appears.

It is said that she is to celebrate the completion of the sale of 50,000 copies of her first book of essays by a trip to Europe. The sale is dragging along slowly now, so that if she adheres to her intention her European trip may be delayed for some time.

DOGS HAVE THEIR DAY.

A Haven Where Vagrant Curs Live in Pampered Luxury.

CHARITY covers a multitude of strange notions, and is exhibited in many curious ways. The Ellen M. Gifford Home for Vagrant Dogs illustrates one of those freaks of the charitably inclined This institution is situated at Brighton, on the outskirts of Boston. The estate comprises one and a quarter acres, on which is erected a handsome stone and brick edifice, designed expressly for its present use. The building cost $15,000. On the ground floor is the office, reception room and kitchen, where the food for the canine inmates is carefully prepared by a trained cook. In the rear of the main building are the kennels, connected with a series of yards, in which the favored brutes may exercise.

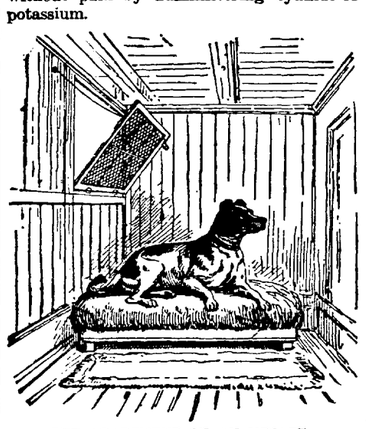
THE HOME FOR DOGS.

This home was established two years ago by Mrs. Ellen Gifford, of New Haven, and it was then turned over to the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, but the society did not pay such attention to the institution as it seemed to need, so Mrs. Gifford resumed control of it herself recently. Besides a very efficient superintendent the home is possessed of an assistant superintendent in a three-legged terrier named "Jo," whose portrait is given in the initial letter of this article. Jo, said the superintendent, Mr. Cushing, was the first inmate of the house two years ago, and he had remained as a sort of assistant superintendent, taking care of the newly received dogs and doing all in his power to make them feel at home. Jo has labored under the disadvantage during all this time of possessing only three legs, but a dog with six legs could not be more active than he. Nothing pleases him more than to be sent chasing after stones or other articles thrown for him. Often his two hind legs will get ahead of his one front leg, but he loses no time by such accidents, eventually bringing up on his feet again without stopping for a fresh start.

"When the police pick up stray dogs," continued Mr. Cushing, "they notify us by telephone, and I drive to the stations and collect the dogs and bring them here. A collar and chain is furnished by the home to every police station for the purpose of confining any dog which may be picked up and held for us, and coupon books are also furnished so that the police may authorize individuals to send stray dogs to us. We won't receive dogs unless somebody vouches for them as being homeless."

"During the past two years, while it was under the care of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty, we cared for about seventy-five stray dogs and seventy-five or one hundred stray cats. No organized system of collecting such animals was maintained, but we simply took such as were brought to us. Homes were found for some of them, and others were killed, but the present intention is to kill no animals unless they are sick and incurable. If they are in good health or can be cured we keep them and sell them if any one will buy them. If no one will buy them we give them away to persons who will take good care of them, and if no one will take them as a gift we will keep them and care for them indefinitely. Mrs. Gifford has expressly declared that she doesn't want this home to be a slaughter house.

No dogs will be killed unless they are incurably diseased, and then it will be done without pain by administering cyanide of potassium.



THE APARTMENT OF AN INMATE.

"The dogs are housed at night in their kennels, which are kept clean and well ventilated, and during the day they are turned into yards for exercise. A hospital kennel is to be built, and then the capacity of the home will be about fifty dogs. The dogs are fed on meat, gravy, vegetables, bread and hasty pudding, and a good many human beings don't fare so well as that."

"We used to take some animals to board, but now we haven't accommodations for boarders, and besides, boarders require a great deal of extra attention. You've no idea how some people care for their pets and feed them, and they expect us to treat them the same if we take them to board. One lady brought a cat here to board while she went into the country, and she was surprised later to learn that her pet had lost its appetite and was homesick. It turned out that the cat had been used to being fed on a quail and a half pint of oysters every day, so it's no wonder that the cat had no appetite for ordinary milk and fish and meat. We used to charge 75 cents a week for boarding cats, and $1.50 to $2 for dogs, and we had at one time eighteen dogs and seventeen or eighteen cats boarding here."

"We only take dogs, now, but we used to take in cats as well—either stray cats or boarders. It requires a good deal of room for cats, however, for they can't be kept in good health if they are confined too closely, or if they are all kept together. They need yards for exercise, and they multiply so rapidly that we should require very much more land to accommodate them. It is the design ultimately to receive stray cats as well as stray dogs, but more land must be first obtained."

"In this city human beings are daily begging for assistance and committing suicide for the want of it," said a refined looking poor washwoman whom your correspondent met outside the gate, where she was resting a huge basketful of clothes. And so it is; but then we may not criticise the direction in which the founder of this home has displayed her sympathy for suffering for she certainly instituted it with a charitable motive.

In the Christian Advocate, Dr. Buckley tells his readers that Dio Lewis had a mind bright, active, and original; prolific of ideas, but not distinguished by sound judgment or stable purpose. "He bore about the same relation to medical science," says the Doctor, "that Henry Ward Beecher does to theology—except that Lewis always stuck to his cardinal principles, physical exercise, abstinence from drugs and liquor, and a simple diet."

Functional derangement of the female system is quickly cured by the use of Dr. R. V. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It removes pain and restores health and strength. By all druggists.

For over a quarter of a century Physicians have prescribed NICHOLS' BARK AND IRON, as a reliable and valuable remedy for dyspepsia and general debility.

REV. H. B. ERRELL, of Pavilion, N. Y., says of Gilmore's Aromatic Wine: "I believe it to be a most desirable remedy to be placed in every family."

WILLIS L. CULVER, of Pavilion, N. Y., says that Gilmore's Magnetic Elixir cured him of a long standing throat and lung trouble.

The Marion county board of equalization has fixed the assessment for taxation purposes of the Central Telephone company at $30,000. No change in the Wabash will be made till along about the middle of September, by which time the purchasing committee will be compelled to pay into court the purchase money. Arrangements are, however, in progress quietly fixing up a board and a new lot of executive officers. It is emphatically stated that Col. Talmage, general manager, and his excellent operating staff, will remain undisturbed.

Fort Wayne merchants would do almost double the business if all the gravel roads leading into the city were free. An effort should be made at once to have the county buy them. It costs almost as much to ride on a gravel road as it does on the railroad and no one can blame farmers for doing their trading elsewhere. If the gravel roads were all free, Fort Waye would be one of the best trading points in the state. We hope the farmers will start the ball rolling.

THE HOME.

A Palace of Pleasure and a Resort Genteel and Elegant---A Fete in Store for the Public.

Mr. John McCain has made his house of call, on Harmony court, back of No. 20 and 22 West Berry street, a resort fit for the gods of pleasure. At an immense outlay it is refurnished and decorated like a gilded palace of old. His bar fixtures are not surpassed in the west and a mammoth mirror reflects the interior like a painting. Mr. McCain has a house of call Fort Wayne people can point to with pride and the modest proprietor has always a welcome for his friends. He has arranged eight Brunswick, Balke, Callender & Co's. billiard tables, one expert table and a pool table. The cue and ivory is a feature of Mr. McCain's resort and the best billiard shots in the city have established it the only place to pass an hour in the genteel game.

Next Wednesday from 8 a. m. on Mr. McCain will give a public reception and in the evening a cold collation, prepared at the McKinnie house, will be spread for visitors. Mr. McCain will make it agreeable for all people and THE SENTINEL is authorized to extend for him a public invitation and welcome.

He simply wants the public to have an idea of the character of his house and its pleasures. The walls and ceilings have been handsomely decorated by Keil Bros. The elegant fixtures and plumbing arrangements of the house are by Hattersley & Son, while Shrimpton & Kendrick planned the style so attractive and handsome. "The Home" is a place of beauty, always genteel, and it ought to be voted the prettiest house in Hoosierdom.

K. OF L'S!

The Pope Issues Strongly Against Them.

And in Canada They are Enjoined From Membership on Pain of Excommunication.

Ottawa Gets a New Archbishop—Cardinal Gibbons Gets His Insignia To-day.

POPE LEO AND K. OF L'S.

Text of the Mandate of Excommunication of Members of the K. of L.

OTTAWA, Ontario, June 21.—The sent of the council of the church, recently held at Quebec, have been called to Rome and approved by the holy see, being returned to America for promulgation, have been received [by Cardinal Tachereau. The principal mandate of the decrees is the following, which is directed against the Knights of Labor, and was, by direction of the holy father, read in all the churches throughout Canada yesterday. The wording of the mandate is as follow:

"The cosmopolitan character of secret societies, and that of the Knights of Labor in particular, necessarily leads their members to compulsory obedience of the dictates of a council residing in a foreign country, which council at a given time may not only have interests at variance with those of the government to which its members owe allegiance, but may even be at war with God. For these and other reasons the church could not consistently tolerate the organization or approve of the means resorted to in order to attain the desired end. The council also deemed it prudent in the church and christianity to consider the secret aims of the promoters of Free Masonry, and to warn the adherents of the Catholic churches against joining any such organizations, especially Knights of Labor, under pain of excommunication."

In another section of the pastoral letter it contained a quotation from Leo Faxile, of France, who was a prominent member of the free masons of old France until last summer. He thinks masonry is a grotesque imitation of Catholicism, and has its rites, but its promoters desire and have their own ceremony apart from the teachings of the peace of God and desire to extingnish and put from existence the teachings of the Catholic faith.

BUTCHERS' BLOWOUT.

Considerable commotion was occasioned at an early hour yesterday morning in this city among the residents, the cause of which was the Butchers' union excursion to Warsaw. At 7:30 the Princess band marched down Calhoun street for the south depot, which was a signal for people that it was near train time. At 8:30 a train composed of seven coaches was comfortably filled with those desirous of visiting our pleasant little suburb about which so much has been said as a pleasure resort, among them being many of Fort Wayne's prominent citizens including their entire families. Promptly at the appointed time the engine pulled out and landed the "men of gore" and their friends in the "City of Lakes." Warsaw is a nice little city and the summer resort, lying north and in between two beautiful lakes, connected by a canal, will, with the expenditure yet of several thousand dollars make one of the nicest resorts in the west. But it is the opinion of her own people, as well as visitors, that they began running excursions before they were properly prepared for them, as in an affair of this sort the first impression goes a great ways in establishing the place permanently.

Warsaw is a temperance and a religious city and yesterday only those who knew the town well, were able to get even a glass of beer, a beverage greatly appreciated by many of the Fort Wayneites. It is understood that but one more excursion will be run there on Sunday and this would not be allowed only that the date has already been fixed. It is said that Superintendent Law, of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago railroad company, was severely criticised for permitting the date yesterday to be filled, as many of the prominent stockholders in the resort are religiously inclined.

NOTES.

There were about 600 tickets sold all told.

The railroad company got a commission.

Tickets to the number of 360 were collected on the train.

Several excursionists fell in the lake, but aside from getting wet were not very much damaged.

Scott Reiter, formerly of this city, but now employed there, made it pleasant for numerous friends.

The excursion train followed from Warsaw in the wake of No. 8 and arrived here at 8 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Lot Logan, of this city, were the guests of Mrs. J. H. Lones, their daughter. Mr. Lones formerly resided here but is now Pittsburg ticket agent at Warsaw.

The steamer cannot pass through the channel connecting the two lakes, because of the shallow water. A new steamer, with less draft will soon be placed on the lakes.

THE SENTINEL representative is indebted to Mr. Gene Gordon and his estimable wife for courtesies. Through the kindness of this hospitable couple we were enabled to visit all points of interest in and about Warsaw.

LONDON, June 21.—The Times publishes what is says is a private special circular recently sent by president of the supreme council to different "centres" of the Irish Republican brotherhood throughout the kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland. It has the duty of Irishmen to support the premier in every way in order to enable him to complete the step he wishes to take. The document is marked "to be destroyed when read."

Concerning Thunder and Lightning.

Meteorologists have found that there can be no thunder and lightning without rain. When thunder is heard beneath a clear sky, the reports must either come from distant clouds or be the result of some other cause than a discharge of electricity. Harvest or heat lightning is produced by a distant storm. Thunder seldom accompanies heat lightning, the sound reaching only about twelve miles, while lightning is often seen, by reflection upon nearer clouds, at a much greater distance.—Chicago Times.

The ring is good and the weight is there, while the whole outside of the coin is genuine.

CONGRESS.

What the National Legislators Did To-day.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—The chair today laid before the senate the credentials of Hon. Nelson W. Aldrich, United States senator from Rhode Island. Read and filed.

Mr. Hoar, from the committe on judiciary, reported favorably a bill to grant Dearborn park, Chicago, to the city for the use and benefit of the public and benevolent institutions. On motion of Mr. Logan the bill was at once taken up and passed.

Mr. George, from the committee on judiciary, reported favorably a bill to remove the political disabilities of J. G. Flourney, of Mississippi, and on motion the bill passed, the vote being unanimous.

Mr. Frye, from the committee on rules, reported favorably the Edmunds resolution providing for such amendment to the rules as admit of debate on motion to reconsider. The resolution was agreed to and the rules were amended accordingly.

The President has sent to congress fifteen veto messages, thirteen of which are private pension bills, the others provide for public buildings at Sioux City, Iowa, and Zanesville, Ohio. The messages have not been laid before the houses of congress.

HOUSE.

The speaker laid before the house a communication from the assistant secretary of the treasury submitting an estimate of an appropriation amounting to $626,744 for the transportation of mails on non-subsidized roads controlled by the Central Pacific Railroad company. Referred.

On motion of Mr. Townsend, of Illinois, the senate amendments to the pension appropriation bill were non-concurred in, and Messrs, Townsend, Wilson and Long were appointed conferees.

The house having resumed consideration of the naval appropriation bill, it was rejected. Yeas, 99; Nays, 141.

A motion was made Saturday by Mr. Goff to recommit the bill with instructions to the committee on naval affairs, to report it back with amendment making provision for the completion of the double turreted monitors. Bill then passed.

The house committee on invalid pensions, to-day agreed to amalgamate the substitute for the Blair bill, pensioning disabled soldiers, with a bill to increase the rate of pensions for soldiers, who have lost a leg or arm, and attach to the combined bills a clause imposing an income tax to meet the expenditure involved.

The clause is patterned after the income tax bill introduced in the 47th congress by General Ewing. Statistics collected at the time the bill was introduced indicated that a revenue of $65,000,000 per annum could be raised in this way. The president signed about fifty private pension bills to-day.

THERE wouldn't be much chance for an anarchist paper in China. A Chinese newspaper writer named Wongtz was recently sentenced to be quartered because, in a scientific article, he had enumerated the names of several dead Emperors, an act contrary to court etiquette. Afterward his punishment was mitigated to decapitation. His children will be put to death in the autumn for the sin of their father.

THE LAKE THAT JOSEPH MADE.

Recent Discovery of the Bed of an Ancient Reservoir of the Nile.

The European press published the statement recently that the Egyptian minister of public works had decided to utilize the recent discovery of the bed of ancient Lake Moeris. He wishes to rebuild the old canal that nearly 4,000 years ago was dug between the basin and the Nile, and make this great depression about sixty miles southwest of Cairo once more the reservoir for the surplus waters of the Nile at flood. He has, therefore, declined the offer made through Mr. C. Whitehouse to restore Lake Moeris by private enterprise to its ancient function of receiving and dispensing the waters of the Nile.

This is a proposal to repeat in modern times a great engineering enterprise which the patriarch Joseph is said by some authorities to have carried out. It is all the more noteworthy because the fact that Lake Moeris ever existed has been denied for centuries. Linant some forty years ago revived the notion that Herodotus told the truth after all, but not until 1882 did the best geographical authorities agree that there was once a Lake Moeris, and that its ancient bed had been found.

Of the wonders that Herodotus described as existing near Memphis, two, the Labyrinth and Lake Moeris, have been unknown to modern research. He and other ancient writers agreed in describing Lake Moeris, as a reservoir of the Nile, 450 miles in circumference, 300 feet deep, and full of fish of twenty-two species. There were dykes at the mouths of the canal by which the engineers stored up or distributed its water supply. The lake was mostly bordered by the desert. On its banks lived multitudes of fishermen, who caught and salted the fish that bred freely in the lake, which owed its existence to one or more artificial channels connecting it with the Nile.

Herodotus, Strabo, Diodorus, Pliny, and other Greek and Latin writers have been freely charged with falsehood or exaggeration in what they wrote about Lake Moeris. C. Ptolemy placed the horn-shaped lake on his map at the very place where exists the great depression of similar shape to which it is now assigned. Some copies of his map, however, did not contain the lake, and editors of Ptolemy in the fifteenth century expurged it from his maps. Chiefly through the researches of Linant, Whitehouse, and, last of all, Stadler, whose observations completed in February established the correctness of previous explorations, the world has at last been convinced that the southern edge of the Fayoum exists a great depression, which is 300 feet below the level of the river, and is separated by a chain of hills from the Nile, with which it was once connected by the Bahr Josuf or canal of Joseph, and perhaps also by another artificial channel.

It is asserted by Mr. Whitehouse and the engineers in Egypt's service who accompanied him in his last journey in 1883 that the work of restoring the lake will prove comparatively easy. They estimate that during the time of the Nile's flood the basin can receive 60,000,000,000 cubic meters of waters a day, and that this volume, shut up in a safe reservoir, will avert all danger of the excessive inundations that afflict the fertile delta. From this reservoir also, when the Nile is low, water can be sent back to the river for purposes of navigation or irrigation. They also assert that a vast amount of land now perpetually under water can, by means of this reservoir, be restored to agriculture; that the big lakes around Alexandria will thus be drained, and the Mediterranean shores of Egypt will again resemble the months of the Rhine and the coast of Holland.—New York Sun.

Value of Rest and Recreation.

In his paper on "Rest and Repair in London Life," in The Fortnightly Review, Dr. Robson Roose—referring to the subject of an annual holiday—says there can be no doubt as to the advantages of this means of rest and recreation. Where to spend a holiday and how best to enjoy it are topics which should frequently engage the thoughts of a man who is working at high pressure. The idea of a holiday, even if the realization be somewhat distant, lessens present discomforts, and the carrying out of a well-devised plan enhances the enjoyment when the time arrives. The number of ways in which a holiday may be profitably spent is almost infinite. Something definite should be aimed at and done during each holiday; an active-minded man must have occupation of some kind even in his hours of recreation. A change of work is, indeed, a form of rest, and happily there is no lack of subjects for every variety of mind. By such means as these mind and body are alike renewed and invigorated.—Chicago News.

Good Cookery Promotes Temperance.

The London Sanitary Record states that a few weeks ago several gentlemen, members of the Newcastle lodge of Good Templars, gave practical demonstration of cookery; showing before a numerous audience how to prepare several cheap and useful dishes on hygienic principles in a satisfactory manner. It was held that there is a marked connection between temperance and good cookery, as it is well known that many men are driven to the public house through having a good dinner spoiled by bad cooking. The demonstrations, which were watched with no little interest and amusement, especially by the female portion of the audience, proved eminently successful.—Exchange.

CRASH!

Went a Store at Decatur, Indiana.

The Hardware House of B. J. Treveer is Destroyed by an Oil Explosion.

And John Ohlmer, a Lodger, Meets With Instant Death in the Wrecked Building.

AN EXPLOSION

Causes the Death of a Clerk and $15,000 Damages.

DECATUR, Ind., June 21.—Yesterday morning an explosion wrecked the hardware store of B. J. Treveer and caused the death of John Ohlmer, who roomed in the second story. It is supposed that a can of benzine leaked and caught fire when the clerk lighted a lamp. Loss, $15,000.

The explosion demolished rear part of the building, which was a two-story brick and throwing the front doors and a large plate-glass window into the street. John Ohler, the clerk, was closing the store at the time, and recived such injuries by the doors falling on him that he died in three hours. The explosion was caused by a can of gasoline taking fire from a lamp. The damage to building and stock will reach $6,000; insured for $1,500, equally in the following companies: Fire Association of Philadelphi, Royal of Cincinnati, and German Insurance of Freeport.

NURSE FOR THE ROYAL BABE.

The great question of the hour at the court of Madrid is the choice of a nurse for the royal infant. Formerly, and down even to the reign of Ferdinand VII., a high court functionary, accompanied by a physician and a numerous suite, traveled through the provinces of Galice and Santander in quest of the nurse who was to be chosen for the royal babe. It is the province of Santander, especially that portion known as "the mountain" that has furnished the greatest contingent of royal nurses. It was once regarded as one of the industries of the place. The royal delegate visited Santander first, and his arrival was solemnly announced in all the towns and villages. The major presented the candidates to him and the doctor put them through a public examination.

To-day it is the nurses who come to Madrid. They are presented to the major-domo, who takes down their names and then passes them to the physician. The work of choosing is no light affair, for the number who aspire to the position of royal nurse is enormous and the applications and recommendations pour in from all sides. This is not surprising, as the position is a very agreeable one. The occupation of royal nurse is very dignified, to begin with. The wages are also very high. The nurse is treated as one of the ladies of the palace, her magnificent costumes are frequently renewed and as they become her own property her wardrobe is soon varied and luxurious. The nurse is never asked to attend to the toilet of the royal infant; a femme de chambre is especially appointed for that duty. The infant remains with the nurse at night, however. Apart from the promenades which she makes with the baby, the nurse may go out when she pleases, but she is always accompanied by two ladies of the palace. When the royal infant is weaned the nurse receives a large money gift, all the members of the royal family give her rich presents and the sovereign bestows on her a pension from the privy purse. It will be readily understood then that the number of applicants for the position is large.

A few days ago Dr. Sanchez Ocana, of the royal faculty of medicine, examined twenty-two robust young women, a few of whom evidently did not belong to the peasant class. They had already nursed the children of some of the highest of the Madrilene aristocracy. Among the applicants one attracted the special attention of everybody. She was decked out in a splendid costume of red and black velvet, trimmed with gold lace, and wore diamond earrings and a dentelle mantilla. She was Raimonda, who has recently been nurse to the baby prince of Bavaria. A repose of nine months in her charming cottage of Revilla allows her to resume her former functions. All the women who have presented themselves are remarkably beautiful, but no choice has yet been made. The most minute investigation takes place before final acceptance concerning the family, the children and especially the moral character of the nurse. The choice is regarded as quite an event in Spain.—Madrid Cor. Paris Figaro.

That Tired Feeling

The warm weather has a debilitating effect, especially upon those who are within doors most of the time. The peculiar, yet common, complaint known as "that tired feeling," is the result. This feeling can be entirely overcome by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which gives new life and strength to all the functions of the body.

"I could not sleep; had no appetite. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and soon began to sleep soundly; could get up without that tired and languid feeling; and my appetite improved." R. A. SANFORD, Kent, Ohio.

Strengthen the System

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of remedial agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over." J. P. THOMPSON, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." T. BARRINGTON, 126 Bank Street, New York City.

There Are a Few Druggists

who care more to make a large profit on a worthless article than to wait for the prosperity that ultimately results from honest dealing. These are the men who when asked for a Benson's Capcine Plaster, will recommend some cheap and trashy substitute or imitation, saying it is "just as good." Sometimes they will do up and sell the miserable imitation without remark, allowing the customer to suppose he has Benson's. If the valueless plaster is returned, Cheap John will say he made a mistake;—if not, he has done a good stroke of business. The public are cautioned against John and all his ilk. STEPS are being taken in Paris to prevent the employment of girls in certain theaters, and in cafes chantant, who are under 15 years of age.

AN attempt to take a census of Paris is proving a failure, because the people fear the lists are submitted to private detective agencies, and improper use made of the information thus obtained.

MOCKING-BIRDS can be taught anything in the way of tunes. Macon used to boast of a bird that whistled "Dixie," and years ago a Frenchman traveled about the country playing airs upon the piano which his bird would follow accurately. At the Pulaski House, in Savannah, a negro used to keep a bird that would whistle a good alto to tunes his master whistled.

ONE of John Ruskin's latest deliverances is one of his best: "The Bible is the greatest group of writings extant in the rational world, put into the grandest language of the rational world in the first strength of Christianity, by an entirely wise and kind saint, St. Jerome; translated afterward with beauty and felicity into every language of the Christian world, and the guide, since so translated, of all the arts and acts of that world which have been noble, fortunate, and happy."

A DISCOVERY has been made by which the faded ink on parchments may be so restored as to render the writing perfectly legible. The process consists in moistening the paper with water and then passing over the lines in writing a brush which has been wet in a solution of ammonia. The writing will immediately appear quite dark in color, and this color, in the case of parchments, it will preserve. On paper, however, the color gradually fades again, but it may be restored at pleasure by the application of sulphide.

A MR. DE LACY, of Nottingham, England, has invented a remarkable automatic life-size figure in the semblance of a Turk. The motive power is electricity. Under the manipulation of the inventor it takes up a copy of the Koran and apparently reads every page, which it turns over, at the same time naturally moving its eyes and turning its head at intervals. The numerous acts it can accomplish are astonishing. The surprise to spectators was great when "Ali" comfortably lifted a hundred weight, picked up a feather, wrote a sentence on a slate, played a musical instument, tore up a paper or went through the sword exercise.

A PAPER published in Orange County, New York, says that the last merchantable tree in the vast hemlock forests that have supplied the mills on Dyberry Creek, one of the tributaries of the Lackawaxen River, for more than a century, has been cut, and recently the veteran river pilot, "Bill" Kimble, drove the last log down the stream that will ever be run to the mills. He also drove the first log that was ever cut in the great forest, in 1860, and has never missed a day's log-driving on the creek in all the intervening time. This tract of hemlock was nearly the last of any extent in Wayne County, whose forests, ten years ago, were yielding 130,000,000 feet of that lumber a year. Fifteen years ago more leather was tanned in Wayne County than in any other county in the Union. The disappearance of the hemlock has caused all but two or three of the tanneries to be abandoned. All who were engaged in the business made large fortunes, and nearly all of them are now engaged in the same business in Elk, Forrest, Warren, and other western counties, where the greatest hemlock forests in the world still densely cover the hills. The tanning industry of these counties now supplies almost the entire sole-leather product of the world. The cutting away of the hemlock woods in Wayne County has had a disastrous effect on the watercourses, many large streams having become almost entirely dry within the past decade.

THE English laborer who recently undertook to imitate Dr. Tanner as a faster came to grief. He was known as the "Fasting man of Guilford." Mysterious voices commanded him to go forty days without food. He was 74 years of age when he started in to obey the strange command. He drank tea with out milk or sugar, and smoked a pipe, incessantly. He survived the ordeal, though reduced to actual skin and bones, and celebrated his performance by making a hearty meal of a leg of mutton. The gorging was too much for his enfeebled stomach, and he died in a couple of days. His surviving relatives were much distressed because the old man had just received a tempting offer from a museum manager who was prepared to make a guinea or two out of his notoriety.

NOTHING has excited more amusement during the debate on the oleomargarine bill, writes a Washington correspondent, than the efforts of some members to pronounce that word aright. At first most of those who spoke pronounced the word as if the "g" were given the sound of "j," but one or two who are authority generally on the question of orthography, gave the "g" a hard sound, and the example has been followed by nearly all who have had the floor later on the debate. Randolph Tucker made desperate efforts to get the word right when he was speaking. "O-le-o-mar-garine" he managed to ejaculate after a struggle in which the last syllable was emphasized more than the others, and the House fairly roared. The reading clerk is one of those who have reformed their pronunciation of the word since the debate began. He now gives "g" a hard sound, and the adherents of the soft "g" are dwindling out of notice.

"I KNOW a city which is the capital of a State, but which has no daily newspaper, and no way of learning the news of the day before 10 o'clock in the morning," said a commercial traveler. "That city," continued he, "is Frankfort, Ky. Its people are intelligent and refined, but they seem to care little about what is going on in the world. Louisville is only sixty miles away, but none of the newspapers of that city has succeeded in getting its editions out into the State in time to make them valuable. But perhaps a Kentucky man enjoys an old newspaper best. I rather think he does. At least he is not given to favoring new ideas. Why, there is a pretty little city near Frankfort which is nearly five miles from a railroad. A railroad company offered to build a line through the city if the residents would give the enterprise some encouragement. A meeting of citizens was called, and it was agreed that a railroad was not needed. 'When any of us wants to go on a journey, which isn't often,' said one prominent citizen, 'we have only five miles to go to take a train. What could be more convenient than that? Besides, if the locomotive should run through our beautiful city it would frighten our horses and scare our women and children, sir.'"

DR. RALPH N. ISHAM, of Chicago, writes to the Medical News commenting upon some recent editorial remarks of that journal concerning the death of a Dr. Warner, of Baltimore, as the result of "fear of hydrophobia." Dr. Isham is a firm believer in the notion that it is not necessary that the animal producing the bite shall be the subject of rabies to induce hydrophobia in the subject bitten. In addition to many cases on record—notably that of the Duke of Hamilton, Governor General of Canada, bitten by a tame fox—Dr. Isham cites a case under his own observation. A boy eight years of age while shaking and cuffing a cat, for some fancied offense, was bitten severely in the thumb, and died of hydrophobia twelve days afterward. The cat was secured and kept under observation for over four months, during which it remained in perfect health, showing no symptom of rabies. "Analogy proves," says the Doctor, "through the animal kingdom that the secretions (saliva) are so changed under the influence of sudden fear or anger as to become poisonous." This is a very different thing from hydrophobia as the result of fear or dread of the disease. That the secretions, especially the lacteal, may become poisonous through the influence of the emotions is a fact which does not depend upon analogy. Text-books on physiology abound in well-authenticated cases of mothers and nurses who, after experiencing some powerful mental emotion of grief, terror, or anger, have taken up healthy babes and suckled them to death in a few moments. Burdach mentions an instance where even a puppy was seized with epileptic convulsions on sucking its mother, who had just been tossed into a fit of rage. In these cases, as in the case of the boy bitten by Dr. Isham, the cause of death is an active physical agent, operating without regard to the mental condition of the victim. In Dr. Warner's case death was caused by nervous fear in his own mind—a morbid dread that he was going to have hydrophobia. Probably not the least valuable feature of Pasteur's treatment is that it allays or prevents such fear.

MODERN MANIAS AND MANIACS.

"These modern manias are filling the world with maniacs," asserted a philosopher recently, alluding sarcastically to the various agitations that of late keep the world in a state of wonder as to what will be the next new movement.

A few years ago everybody began to walk. It is true that all the world acquires this art at an early age, but the movement merged into a mania when pedestrians who walked for wages suddenly began to multiply upon the earth. Tramp, tramp, tramp, not only the boys, but also the girls, began to take up the line of march.

By and by, the cost of shoe leather must have troubled the economists, and Necessity, the reputed mother of invention, produced the bicycle. Straightway all the masculines became a victim to the bicycle craze, and desperate attempts were made to gain renown by speeding over the ground, on the best attempt at a flying machine that was ever patented. This craze, when it began to prey upon the feminine mind, took the form of tricycling; but the dear creatures had already gone daft with pasting pictures on old jars and jugs, and, later on, with spoiling the pristine purity of their best china by making it gorgeous with bugs, birds, and flowers—so humanity was spared the sight of every woman in the land whizzing through it on a tricycle.

Next, there came a long-haired aesthete from across the blue Atlantic, and immediately the once despised sunflower was given a place beside the stately lily. Along with Oscar Wilde and the sunflower, came the stork pensively meditating on one leg and liberally sprinkled over tidies, plaques, and whatever else was essential to household happiness.

The prevalence of the Mother Hubbard craze became appalling, and lovely woman indeed "stooped to folly" when she donned the dress. Another mania that rendered the whole feminine world akin in its madness, was the manufacture of the crazy quilt, and this article caused the wholesale sacrifice of many a youth's happiness and neckties. The Japanese craze continues to be manifested in the form of fans upon our walls; the hot water craze was cheap and harmless; that which calls for antiquities never included old maids; the autograph affliction has driven scores of people crazy, and postage stamp and coin collections goad the collectors to frenzy when somebody else outdoes them.

But the evolution craze which evolved the dudes from some mysterious source was the worst one of them all, and society has not yet recovered from the introduction of the species. After these came the coachmen who posed before the public as the heroes of the hour, but the roller rink mania has caused them to be superseded by the darling of the chalk dust arena. Roller skating and progressive euchre have proved the most contagious crazes that have ever unbalanced mankind's mental equilibrium, and the person who has escaped these last and greatest of them all, surely is one of the present wonders of the world.—Lizzie Snyder, in St. Louis Magazine.

The Voice of the People.

The people, as a whole, seldom make mistakes and the unanimous voice of praise which comes from those who have used Hood's Sarsaparilla, fully justifies the claims of the proprietors of this great medicine. Indeed, these very claims are based entirely on what the people say Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for them. Read the abundant evidence of its curative powers, and give it a fair, honest trial.

THREE CABINET LADIES.

PORTRAITS OF SOCIAL LEADERS AT WASHINGTON.

Mrs. Endicott, Mrs. Manning, Mrs. Vilas and Miss Cleveland—They Represent New England, New York and the West. The Inventor of "Innocuous Desuetude."

Of the historic twenty-six persons who gathered around the festal board at the sumptuous "stand up" wedding supper of President Cleveland, four were wives of cabinet officers. These ladies were called from private life to a semi-official social position when their husbands accepted the various portfolios of their respective departments. They appear to be a harmonious gathering of women, on the whole. The country has heard less of that petty and disgraceful bickering about who shall go ahead of whom and which shall sit nearest the president at state dinners than usually gets to the public ear in such cases. The cabinet ladies have certainly done their best to make President Cleveland's administration a social success. They seem to have been equal throughout to the arduous social duties required of them—duties so wearing that in the beginning, poor, sweet Kate Bayard succumbed to the strain. They are courteous, dignified, handsomely dressed and hospitable. Our readers will be glad to see some of their portraits.

MRS. ENDICOTT.

By reason of seniority, the wife of Secretary of War Endicott is presented first. Her face is strong and clear-cut. One would say it was the typical Boston face. Mrs. Endicott looks like the high-bred New England woman of long descent. She wore a red pompon in her handsome gray hair at the president's wedding. Mrs. Endicott is her husband's first cousin. Both are descendants of the Putnam family.

One effect of that wedding will be that newspaper correspondents can no longer periodically inform the public who is the first lady in the land. We have a first lady now, no mistake, and one who, judging from her chin, will be able to keep so. Washington etiquette is solemnly peculiar, and, like the ways of Providence, hard to understand. A lot of old ladies of both sexes have it in their especial keeping, and believe the sun would not rise behind the dome of the Capitol if they did not prescribe which foot the first lady in the land should put forward when she starts down stairs of a morning. It would give the country such a delightful thrill if some official lady should suddenly give all their fusty old notions a deliberate slap in the face, and do as she pleased.

MRS. MANNING.

Here we have a typical New York woman's face, and one may be pardoned for saying a very pretty one, too. Mrs. Manning is originally from Albany, a town which is as proud of its blue blood and old families as even Boston itself. It is said to be easy enough to get into high life in New York city if one has money, but almost impossible for an outsider to do the same in Albany. The old Dutch element is stronger there than in the metropolis.

Mrs. Manning had not been long married to her husband when he became secretary of the treasury. He was a widower before their marriage. The lady dresses richly and tastefully. Like most New York women she knows just the right thing to put on and how to wear it. Mrs. Manning is as handsome as her husband, who is noted for his fine personal appearance. Together they are a noble looking pair.

If an artist had sought the country over for the three types of women here shown, the New England, the New York and the western, he could not have selected better specimens than Mrs. Endicott, Mrs. Manning and Mrs. Vilas. There is an earnest, kindly look in Mrs. Vilas' honest eyes that attracts one at once. She looks a hearty, whole-souled woman, with character enough to impress herself upon any society. She and the postmaster general went to the capital from Wisconsin. Mrs. Vilas dresses handsomely and is fond of blue gowns.

MRS. VILAS.

There is one, too, who, for a season, was associated with those ladies who stamped her personality upon Washington society more than any of them. That was Miss Rose Elizabeth Cleveland. She held herself bravely and well in Washington, and leaves it with the best wishes and the sincere good will of all the country. She was not aggressive or did not attempt to revolutionize Washington ways.

She did her best, modestly and with dignity, as mistress of the White House, holding still somewhat to the old ways and the old convictions which had been with her for a lifetime. One is only sorry that she yielded so far to the dictates of the old cats of both sexes at Washington as to try to peg up and confine her artistic, short, curly hair and make it look as though it was "done up." Her own way of wearing it suited her much better, and consequently looked better. When she was a school teacher her friends called her "Johnny Cleveland." In spite of President Cleveland's mild statement that he invented the phrase "innocuous desuetude" himself, there will always be those who will believe Libbie did it.

MISS CLEVELAND.

Now that she resigns the scepter of the White House to young Mrs. Cleveland, Miss Rose Elizabeth retires to her home at Holland Patent, N. Y., to engage in literary work. It is a pretty home, fitted up with the earnings of her book of essays. Success to her literary efforts, and we'll all read her novel, the "Long Row," as soon as it appears.

It is said that she is to celebrate the completion of the sale of 50,000 copies of her first book of essays by a trip to Europe. The sale is dragging along slowly now, so that if she adheres to her intention her European trip may be delayed for some time.

DOGS HAVE THEIR DAY.

A Haven Where Vagrant Curs Live in Pampered Luxury.

HARITY covers a multitude of strange notions, and is exhibited in many curious ways. The Ellen M. Gifford Home for Vagrant Dogs illustrates one of those freaks of the charitably inclined. This institution is situated at Brighton, on the outskirts of Boston. The estate comprises one and a quarter acres, on which is erected a handsome stone and brick edifice, designed expressly for its present use. The building cost $15,000. On the ground floor is the office, reception room and kitchen, where the food for the canine inmates is carefully prepared by a trained cook. In the rear of the main building are the kennels, connected with a series of yards, in which the favored brutes may exercise.

THE HOME FOR DOGS.

This home was established two years ago by Mrs. Ellen Gifford, of New Haven, and it was then turned over to the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, but the society did not pay such attention to the institution as it seemed to need, so Mrs. Gifford resumed control of it herself recently. Besides a very efficient superintendent the home is possessed of an assistant superintendent in a three-legged terrier named "Jo," whose portrait is given in the initial letter of this article. Jo, said the superintendent, Mr. Cushing, was the first inmate of the house two years ago, and he had remained as a sort of assistant superintendent, taking care of the newly received dogs and doing all in his power to make them feel at home. Jo has labored under the disadvantage during all this time of possessing only three legs, but a dog with six legs could not be more active than he. Nothing pleases him more than to be sent chasing after stones or other articles thrown for him. Often his two hind legs will get ahead of his one front leg, but he loses no time by such accidents, eventually bringing up on his feet again without stopping for a fresh start.

"When the police pick up stray dogs," continued Mr. Cushing, "they notify us by telephone, and I drive to the stations and collect the dogs and bring them here. A collar and chain is furnished by the home to every police station for the purpose of confining any dog which may be picked up and held for us, and coupon books are also furnished so that the police may authorize individuals to send stray dogs to us. We won't receive dogs unless sorrowfully vouches for them as being homeless."

"During the past two years, while it was under the care of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty, we cared for about seventy-five stray dogs and seventy-five or one hundred stray cats. No organized system of collecting such animals was maintained, but we simply took such as were brought to us. Homes were found for some of them, and others were killed, but the present intention is to kill no animals unless they are sick and incurable. If they are in good health or can be cured we keep them and sell them if any one will buy them. If no one will buy them we give them away to persons who will take good care of them, and if no one will take them as a gift we will keep them and care for them indefinitely. Mrs. Gifford has expressly declared that she doesn't want this home to be a slaughter house.

No dogs will be killed unless they are incurably diseased, and then it will be done without pain by administering cyanide of potassium.

THE APARTMENT OF AN INMATE.

"The dogs are housed at night in their kennels, which are kept clean and well ventilated, and during the day they are turned into yards for exercise. A hospital kennel is to be built, and then the capacity of the home will be about fifty dogs. The dogs are fed on meat, gravy, vegetables, bread and hasty pudding, and a good many human beings don't fare so well as that."

"We used to take some animals to board, but now we haven't accommodations for boarders, and besides, boarders require a great deal of extra attention. You've no idea how some people care for their pets and feed them, and they expect us to treat them the same if we take them to board. One lady brought a cat here to board while she went into the country, and she was surprised later to learn that her pet had lost its appetite and was homesick. It turned out that the cat had been used to being fed on a quail and a half pint of oysters every day, so it's no wonder that the cat had no appetite for ordinary milk and fish and meat. We used to charge 75 cents a week for boarding cats, and $1.50 to $2 for dogs, and we had at one time eighteen dogs and seventeen or eighteen cats boarding here."

"We only take dogs, now, but we used to take in cats as well—either stray cats or boarders. It requires a good deal of room for cats, however, for they can't be kept in good health if they are confined too closely, or if they are all kept together. They need yards for exercise, and they multiply so rapidly that we should require very much more land to accommodate them. It is the design ultimately to receive stray cats as well as stray dogs, but more land must be first obtained."

"In this city human beings are daily begging for assistance and committing suicide for the want of it," said a ruffled looking poor washwoman whom your correspondent met outside the gate, where she was resting a huge basketful of clothes. And so it is; but then we may not criticise the direction in which the founder of this home has displayed her sympathy for suffering for she certainly instituted it with a charitable motive.

Dr. Dickey tells his readers that Dio Lewis had a mind bright, active, and original; prolific of ideas, but not disciplined by sound judgment or scientific purpose. "He bore about the same relation to medical science," says the Doctor, "that Henry Ward Beecher does to theology—except that Lewis always stuck to his cardinal principles, physical exercise, abstinence from drugs and liquor, and a simple diet."

For over a quarter of a century physicians have prescribed NICHOLS' BARK AND IRON, as a reliable and valuable remedy for dyspepsia and general debility.

REV. H. B. ERRELL, of Pavilion, N. Y., says of Gilmore's Aromatic Wine: "I believe it to be a most desirable remedy to be placed in every family."

The Marion county board of equalization has fixed the assessment for taxation purposes of the Central Telephone company at $30,000. No change in the Wabash will be made till along about the middle of September, by which time the purchasing committee will be compelled to pay into court the purchase money. Arrangements are, however, in progress quietly fixing up a board and a new lot of executive officers. It is emphatically stated that Col. Talmage, general manager, and his excellent operating staff, will remain undisturbed.

Fort Wayne merchants would do almost double the business if all the gravel roads leading into the city were free. An effort should be made at once to have the county buy them. It costs almost as much to ride on a gravel road as it does on the railroad and no one can blame farmers for doing their trading elsewhere. If the gravel roads were all free, Fort Wayne would be one of the best trading points in the state. We hope the farmers will start the ball rolling.

THE HOME.

Mr. John McCain has made his house of call, on Harmony court, back of No. 20 and 22 West Berry street, a resort fit for the gods of pleasure. At an immense outlay it is refurnished and decorated like a gilded palace of old. His bar fixtures are not surpassed in the west and a mammoth mirror reflects the interior like a painting. Mr. McCain has a house of call Fort Wayne people can point to with pride and the modest proprietor has always a welcome for his friends. He has arranged eight Brunswick, Balke, Callender & Co's. billiard tables, one expert table and a pool table. The cue and ivory is a feature of Mr. McCain's resort and the best billiard shots in the city have established it the only place to pass an hour in the genteel game.

Next Wednesday from 8 a. m. on Mr. McCain will give a public reception and in the evening a cold collation, prepared at the McKinnie house, will be spread for visitors. Mr. McCain will make it agreeable for all people and THE SENTINEL is authorized to extend for him a public invitation and welcome.

He simply wants the public to have an idea of the character of his house and its pleasures. The walls and ceilings have been handsomely decorated by Keil Bros. The elegant fixtures and plumbing arrangements of the house are by Hattersley & Son, while Shrimpton & Kendrick planned the style so attractive and handsome. "The Home" is a place of beauty, always genteel, and it ought to be voted the prettiest house in Hoosierdom.
